INTRODUCTION

The Local Heritage Survey for the Shire of Nannup was first created in 1996 in accordance with the requirements of the Heritage of Western Australia Act 1990 (Section 45) which required the Councils of all local authorities in Western Australia to compile and maintain inventories of buildings within their districts which were, or may become, of cultural heritage significance. These Local Heritage Surveys involved a process of public consultation. The Heritage Council of Western Australia provides guidelines for the preparation of heritage surveys and this survey has been prepared in strict accordance with the Heritage Act 2018 and State Planning Policy 3.5 Historic Heritage and Conservation.

Originally the preparation of heritage surveys for the Shires of Boyup Brook, Bridgetown/Greenbushes, Manjimup and Nannup were commissioned as a joint project between the South West Development Corporation and the individual Shires. The brief for the project included the preparation of surveys for each Shire and the preparation of a composite heritage strategy for the whole region to be included with the Warren-Blackwood Regional Plan.

The local heritage survey for the Shire of Nannup consists of three sections. Firstly, the thematic framework, secondly the summary site list with preliminary information and management categories for each site and thirdly the detailed assessment of approximately eighty-four sites in accordance with Heritage Council guidelines. Out of 57 sites listed, only twenty-two sites were assessed in detail in the original 1996 Shire of Nannup Municipal Inventory due to the cost restrictions of the project.

Heritage lists were compiled from a number of sources including Shire schedules, the Heritage Council database, and National Trust records. Heritage sites nominated during a program conducted by the South West Heritage Taskforce in 1990 and obtained from the South West Development Commission (previously the South West Development Authority) were also incorporated into the preliminary lists. Additional sites were nominated through the community consultation process.

EXPLANATION OF ASSESSMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The site assessments should be read in conjunction with the thematic framework which provides a summary outline of the history and development of the Shire through time. The framework provides an overview of the history of the Shire organised across time periods pertinent to the development of the region, where possible the date of construction and where possible a brief description and assessment of significance of the site is included and a guide to appropriate management.

The overall level of significance and management categories recognise the varying degrees of importance of heritage places to the community. They reflect the:

Nature of Significance

- Aesthetic value – It is significant in exhibiting articular aesthetic characteristics valued by the community.
- Historic value – it is significant in the evolution or pattern of the history of Western Australia
- Scientific value – Potential to yield information that will contribute to an understanding of the history of the locality or region.
- Social value – it is significant through association with a community or cultural group in the locality or region for social, cultural, educational, or spiritual reasons.
- Spiritual value – it is significant because it embodies or evokes tangible values and meanings which give it importance in the spiritual identity, or the traditional knowledge, art, and practices of a cultural group.

Rating and Assessment

- Aesthetic value – it demonstrates particular aesthetic characteristics valued by the community.
- Rarity – it demonstrates rare, uncommon or endangered aspect of the cultural heritage of the local district.
- Architectural merit - project that reflects exemplary architectural and urban design and contributes to the public realm.
- Value as part of a group or precinct – it is significant in demonstrating the characteristics of a class of cultural places or environments in the local district.
- Condition – the current state of the place in relation to the values for which that place has been assessed.
- Integrity – the extent to which a building retains its original function.

Management Categories

Places that are considered to be of significant heritage value and worthy of conservation are identified on the Heritage List.

Heritage places with Management categories '1', '2' and '3' are included on the Heritage List while places with a Management Category of '4' are not included on the Heritage List.

Level of significance to local area	Category	Description	Heritage list Inclusion
Exceptional Significance	1	Essential to the heritage of the locality	All places included in the heritage list
Considerable Significance	2	Rare or outstanding example	All places included in the heritage list
Some / Moderate Significance	3	Very important to the heritage of the locality	Places may be included in the heritage list
Little Significance	4	Contributes to the heritage of the locality	Below the threshold for the heritage list

THEMATIC FRAMEWORK

1828 – 1850

SETTLEMENT

In 1797 a French exploration party led by D'Entrecasteaux explored the south west coastline. (Berry 1987)

The settlement of Western Australia can be considered to commence with the landing at Fremantle of Captain James Stirling in 1829 and the subsequent establishment of the Swan River colony. In 1830 a townsite was established at Augusta.

In 1831 Lieutenant Preston explored the coastline in a whaleboat. His party was forced to walk overland from west of Point D'Entrecasteaux to Augusta and in the process crossed the Warren and Donnelly Rivers. Also, in 1831 the area was crossed by Captain Bannister and a Mr Smith of the Surveyor-General's Department. In 1834 a party headed by Thomas Turner is recorded to have traced the Blackwood River from its source to its head waters. In 1845 A. C. Gregory explored the Blackwood in the opposite direction. Both of these parties would have passed through the Nannup area. (Gilbert 1973)

PEOPLE

Early explorers and surveyors who prepared the way for later settlement.

1850 – 1885

SETTLEMENT

Prior to 1850 all land was disposed of by sale. However, in 1850 legislation was passed which made provision for pastoral leases on land more than two miles from the coast, occupied townships or principal rivers. Leases cost 10s. Per 1,000 acres for an eight-year period with the prospect of renewal at the end of that period. (Games 1970) As a direct result settlers began moving into the timber country of the south-west. Grazing leases adjacent to the south coast were also taken up at this period.

In 1852, Assistant Surveyor Augustus Charles Gregory explored extensively in the area of the Blackwood and Donnelly Rivers. Land surveys were undertaken in 1858 by Assistant Surveyor Robert Austin whose report refers to several settlers in the area and to localities later known as Tanjannerup, Dudinalup and Cundinup. (Gilbert 1973)

TRANSPORT & COMMUNICATION

Settlers arrived by bullock dray along bush tracks. At this period there were few roads in the area and those that existed were rough and poorly made. However, those that did exist formed the basis for the road network in the area today. The main route into the Nannup area was from Busselton. Convicts constructed the road from Nannup to the Warren House around 1870.

Tracks to the coast were created from the leasehold lands in the interior when the graziers realised the relationship between grazing on the coast and in the inland areas and established grazing cycles.

Stockman's huts were constructed in coastal areas.

The first post office in the Nannup area is recorded in the 1870s.

OCCUPATIONS

The main occupations of the early pioneers were sheep and cattle raising on the pastoral leases, catching wild horses and timber cutting, both to clear the land for grazing and for the growing timber industry. The timber trade was buoyant with markets for jarrah railway sleepers in Eastern Australia and India and for telegraph poles in South Australia. From the 1870s there was a growing demand for railway sleepers in Western Australia.

SOCIAL & CIVIC LIFE

During the early years the settlers' time and energy were directed to survival. There were few community facilities and family, and neighbours had to rely on each other in times of need and for social interaction. Community life was centred on the home. Visits between neighbours, visits from outsiders to the district, church services and occasional picnics were the main social activities.

The first police station in the area is recorded in 1868 (Gilbert 1973).

OUTSIDE INFLUENCES

The introduction of convict transportation in 1850 had a major impact on the entire colony. The effect on the Nannup area was twofold. Firstly, convicts provided the much-needed labour to undertake public works programs. Their major contribution was the construction of the road from Nannup to the Warren House (near Pemberton). Secondly the arrival of the convicts boosted the local economy through government supply contracts to provide food and materials to the convict work gangs. When convict transportation ceased in 1868 there was a general slowing down of the economy with the British government no longer buying farm produce.

The start of railway construction in Eastern Australia also had an effect on the region through the establishment of the timber industry.

1885 - 1914

SETTLEMENT

The period 1885 to 1914 was a period of considerable increase in settlement in the region. Factors effecting the pattern of settlement included the development of transport systems, roads and railway in particular, and the general growth and prosperity related to the gold rush. The development of the railway led to an increased demand for hardwood and for jarrah in particular for railway sleepers. There was a general movement of labour to the area to work in the timber industry and also for the construction of railways. There was also encouragement for those wishing to settle on the land with land grants created by the Land Act of 1898. As the area was opened up small towns developed and with them opportunities for business. A number of towns developed in association with timber mills in the area.

Nannup was officially declared a townsite in 1890.

TRANSPORT & COMMUNICATION

The development of the railways was the most significant factor effecting transport in the area during this period. The South-western Railway was gradually extended into the region. The railway was extended to Nannup in 1909.

Road transport also improved with the construction of roads between the various small towns and settlements and the first motor vehicles appeared in the area.

Postal services developed with post offices constructed in various centres.

OCCUPATIONS

During this period the settlers in the region were occupied in a diverse range of occupations including various types of farming from cattle and sheep raising to mixed farming and fruit growing. There was also extensive employment in the timber industry, both in the early mills and in the forestry industry. Fruit became an important export crop in the area with developing markets both in Western Australia and overseas.

Mining of graphite near Donnelly River took place around the turn of the century. (Berry 1987) Although some graphite was shipped to the U. K. it was inferior quality and mining ceased after a few years.

SOCIAL & CIVIC LIFE

The period 1885 to 1914 saw the development of a system of local administration in the region. In 1887 the Nelson Road Board was established covering an area from the ocean in the south to Donnybrook in the north, Kojonup in the east and Capel in the west. Further division of administrative control occurred within the decade. In 1890 the Lower Blackwood Road Board was established in the Nannup.

During this period a number of small towns developed throughout the region providing services to the rural districts and the opportunity for social and civic life to develop. Churches provided a focus for community activity and balls and dances were popular pastimes. Sports were always popular in the region including football, cricket, tennis, rifle shooting and golf.

The first school in the area was opened at Darradup in 1900. The first school in Nannup opened in 1903 in the Agricultural Hall. A school building was constructed in 1905. (Gilbert 1973)

OUTSIDE INFLUENCES

In 1886 gold was discovered in the Kimberley region of Western Australia. Although these finds proved to be disappointing, they were the catalyst for increased migration particularly from the eastern states which were experiencing a period of economic depression following the end of their gold boom. In 1892 major finds of gold were recorded at Coolgardie 500 km to the east of Perth and the following decade saw the rapid expansion of the eastern goldfields centred on Coolgardie and Kalgoorlie.

Between 1885 and 1895 the population of Western Australia increased from 35,000 to 82,000. (Gains 1970) Increased prosperity and population led to development and the construction of numerous public buildings and public facilities including the railways. After the gold boom numerous fortune seekers stayed on settling in various parts of the state and seeking employment in numerous developing industries. In 1898 the Land Act was passed which offered miners the opportunity to settle on the land. Settlers were offered 160 acres on surveyed land, or more in unsurveyed areas as an incentive to settle the rural areas. The government issued The Settlers Guide and local committees were set up to advise and assist new comers. (Gains 1970)

Federation in 1901 had an effect on the state as a whole. The greatest effect of this however was probably not felt until 1914 when Australia as a whole participated in World War I.

SETTLEMENT

The period 1914 to 1945 was characterised by various attempts to settle the area, their failures and their successes. The most significant of these were the Soldier Settlement and the Group Settlement Schemes of the 1920s. A number of settlers arrived in the lower Blackwood area under the Soldier Settlement Scheme.

During the 1930s the area felt the effects of the Depression when world prices for primary produce collapsed, and many struggling settlers were forced off their land. Others survived this period by diversifying their farms or businesses.

TRANSPORT & COMMUNICATION

Railways remained the main means of transport throughout the period. There was also considerable road construction and upgrading.

OCCUPATIONS

There were a wide variety of occupations in the region during the period. These included, mill work, forestry, road and railway construction, grazing, mixed farming including dairying, pig farming, poultry farming, fruit growing, etc. Trapping possums became illegal in 1920 but had previously been a lucrative fur export trade.

SOCIAL & CIVIC LIFE

The period 1914 to 1945 was characterised by an increase in community awareness reflected in the establishment of service organisations and clubs. This was partly a response to the major world issues of the period including two world wars and the Depression of the 1930s. It was also a response to the increases in local population and in community life in the area. Examples include the Red Cross branches which developed around the World War I period, R. S. L. which developed after the war, Country Women's Association and various co-operative societies.

Socially sports continued to play an important part in people's lives. Popular activities included tennis, golf, bowls, cricket, football etc. There were also opportunities for non-sporting recreational activities including amateur dramatics and dances.

During this period moving pictures also became popular. Most country towns were on a circuit with the movies and the movie operators moving from town to town on a weekly basis to show films. Films were shown in the Nannup Town Hall.

OUTSIDE INFLUENCES

The major outside events impacting on the development of the Nannup area during this period were two World Wars and the economic Depression of the 1930s. The end of World War I brought the introduction of new ideas and technology as men returned from overseas. There was also significant post war immigration initially from the United Kingdom but later from southern Europe.

The intervening period was characterised by the increased provision of services including electric lighting, telephone and radio and the rise in popularity of moving pictures. The Depression years of the early 1930s saw increased diversification of farms as farmers struggled to survive the collapse of world prices. Some were forced to abandon the land and move to the city.

During World War II the rural sector experienced considerable prosperity with markets requiring products for the war effort and the government instituting schemes to provide for these requirements. The role of women became prominent in the economy as men were required for the war effort.

Reveley Bridge 1921

1945 - 1975

SETTLEMENT

The post-World War II period was characterised by increased settlement in the area due to prosperity in the rural sector and to the government assisted migration programs from Britain and post war resettlement from Europe. In 1945 the War Service Land Settlement Scheme was established to enable the rehabilitation of ex-servicemen.

TRANSPORT & COMMUNICATION

Railways continued to be important both for passengers and conveyance of produce. During the period motor transport became increasingly important. Roads improved and there was a large increase in private ownership of cars.

OCCUPATIONS

The timber industry continued to be central to the economy of Nannup. Fruit growing, especially apples continued to be a major agricultural occupation. There was also continuation of mixed farming and dairying. Service industries to serve the rural area increased in Nannup.

The increased accessibility of the area through private car ownership led to the development of the area as a popular tourist destination.

SOCIAL & CIVIC LIFE

The influx of new arrivals to the district joined an established community with a strong sense of identity. Many of the newcomers came from a range of different cultural backgrounds. Over time this cultural diversity enriched the community with the introduction of new skills, sporting, and cultural activities. In common with past arrivals, self-help community co-operation were features of the newcomers' efforts to establish themselves.

OUTSIDE INFLUENCES

After World War II the Australian government's immigration policy led to a large influx of migrants from the United Kingdom and Europe. The post war period was therefore characterised by programs to assist the resettlement of returned servicemen and the settlement of the new immigrant population. Immigration, combined with the natural increase in population in the baby boom years of the 1950s led to a need for housing and the 1950s and 1960s was a period of activity in the housing market with the State Housing Commission playing a prominent role. The period was generally one of prosperity for the rural sector with increases in population and the growth of community life.

PLACES

Donnelly River Timber Mill 1948

1975 - 1995

SETTLEMENT

The period 1975 to 1995 has been characterised by decline in some sectors and development in other sectors of the region. Generally, there has been a trend towards corporate ownership of some rural industries and the decline of smaller operations. There has been an increase in the service sector with the gradual growth of Nannup as a service centre and the decline of some smaller towns. Settlement of the area has also been prompted by the growth of the tourism industry and by the attraction of the country lifestyle as an alternative to city life.

TRANSPORT & COMMUNICATION

The period 1975 to 1995 has been characterised by the decline and closure of the once comprehensive railway service. The closest passenger railway service to Nannup terminates in Bunbury.

The increase in car ownership has reduced the emphasis on public transport services.

The development of electronic communications technology has facilitated transfer of information and provided benefits of time and efficiency for both local business and local government activities.

OCCUPATIONS

The timber industry and fruit growing have remained important industries throughout the period. Tree farming, especially blue gums, has increased in importance. Economic stability has largely resulted from the breadth of the economic base of the area generally. There has been an increase in the service and professional sectors largely focussed upon Nannup and including services provided through the local authority. Tourism has become an important area of employment including the hospitality industry, entertainment such as horse riding and the increase in local arts and crafts industries.

SOCIAL & CIVIC LIFE

The Nannup Shire offers a wide range of civic and recreational services including libraries, child health, senior citizens, and recreational facilities. The district also includes a wide range of sporting grounds and cultural facilities and there are a number of community organisations. Church and social gatherings still play an important role in community life.

OUTSIDE INFLUENCES

Outside influences during this period are mainly related to the general growth and development of the state of Western Australia. Generally, the period has been marked by the prosperity of the mineral boom of the 1970s, the corporate proposals of the 1980s followed by a period of comparative economic decline in the late 1980s and early 1990s. There has been decline in some aspects of the rural sector, but an increase in tourism and the service sector.

1995 - 2024

SETTLEMENT

The period 1995 to 2024 has been characterised by decline in some sectors and development in other sectors of the region. Generally, there has been a trend towards developments in the area by way of plantation growth and holiday accommodation. There has been an increase in the tourism sector with the gradual growth of Nannup as a tourism town and the decline of some smaller towns. Settlement of the area has also been expanded substantially by the growth of the tourism industry and by the attraction of the country lifestyle as an alternative to city life.

TRANSPORT & COMMUNICATION

The period 1996 to 2024 has been characterised by the evolution of technology. This sees an emphasis on electronic vehicles that do not rely on the usual fuels we have seen in the past.

The increase in fuel costs is backing the increase in electronic vehicles.

The development of electronic communications technology is taking over and playing a major part in today's economy. There is a major dependency on technology, and it is evident when technology fails.

OCCUPATIONS

The timber industry has remained an important industry throughout the period. Tree farming, especially blue gums, has increased in importance. Economic stability has largely resulted from the breadth of the economic base of the area generally. There has been an increase in the service industry by way of holiday accommodation with holiday houses become a source of income. Tourism has become instrumental for employment including the hospitality industry, whole foods services and the increase in local arts and crafts industries.

SOCIAL & CIVIC LIFE

The Nannup Shire offers a wide range of civic and recreational services including libraries, child health, senior citizens, and recreational facilities. The district also includes a wide range of sporting grounds and cultural facilities and there are a number of community organisations. Church and social gatherings still play an important role in community life. With the increase in tourism there has been a substantial increase in community events throughout the Shire such as the Nannup Music Festival, The Flower and Garden festival, The youth Zone which is on weekly for the younger population and multiple bike events through the year.

OUTSIDE INFLUENCES

Outside influences during this period are mainly related to the general growth and development of the state of Western Australia. There has been a decline in some aspects of the rural sector, but an increase in tourism and the service sector.

PLACE RECORDS

Place record forms have been created for each of the places in the inventory. The place record form contains the following information (if available) about each place:

- Place number – Inventory record number for the particular place.
- Location
 - Place Name– Name of place.
 - State Heritage Office ID – the number given to the place on the InHerit database.
 - Location – Property Address, town or suburb and Local Government Authority
- Land Description
 - Location – Diagram on plan number, certificate of title and other details
- Period – Design style, type of building and construction date
- Use of Place – Original and current use of place
- Historical Notes – Historic theme of place, brief history of the place and reference
- Building Details – architectural style, construction materials and architect/builder details
- Categories of Significance – Identifies why the place is significant in terms of aesthetic value, historic value, scientific value, social value and/or spiritual value.
- Rating and Assessment – Identifies the place's rarity, representativeness, condition, integrity and authenticity.
- Statement of Significance – Identifies the overall significance of the place and outcomes that may assist in issues such as preserving values, ongoing conservation, interpretation and future development.
- Management Categories – Level of significance regarding conservation
- Heritage Listings – all relevant heritage listings for the place, including the State Register of Heritage Places (and assessment program) and the Shire's Heritage List.

HISTORICAL NOTES

The All Saints Anglican Church was built in 1914 and opened on 6th June 1914 by Bishop Goldsmith of Bunbury. The block originally extended as far north as Killerby's buildings, and through to Grange Rd. Two school residences were built facing Adam St in 1978 but are no longer in existence. The rest of the block was subdivided and sold, but after being declared flood-prone it was resumed and declared public open space.

DESCRIPTION

The building is situated in the main street Warren Rd, near the corner of Warren Rd and Adam St. A number of places of heritage significance are nearby and this church is an important component of the locality. The building sits on a grassed open space and has a number of mature trees to the front and side, along with a rose-lined path to its entrance. It is timber framed with timber weatherboards and a corrugated iron roof.

HISTORICAL NOTES

Ammon's Store was built in 1930 by Jack Whittle for Mrs Helen Ammon. She had rented a shop across the road but when the executors of the estate raised the rent, Mrs Ammon refused to pay and had her own shop built. The shop was a drapers and confectioners and had the first commercial fridge in Nannup apart from the Nannup Hotel. The building has since been used as a menswear store, hairdressing salon, fish & chip shop and art gallery. The building currently houses Ray White Real Estate.

DESCRIPTION

Ammon's Store is constructed of timer weatherboards and has a corrugated iron roof. The shop front was added at a later date.

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Barrabup Mill was built by WA Jarrah Saw Mills Company in 1908. In 1913 ownership was transferred to Kauri Timber Company. The timber town was abandoned around 1922, and in 1925 it was dismantled and transferred to the present mill site in Nannup.

DESCRIPTION

The Barrabup Strongroom (associated with the now demolished/relocated Barrabup Mill) site consists of a single concrete 3m x 2.5m x 2.5m steel reinforced structure, located about 6m off the road side, amidst an overgrown site of bush and young saplings. There is a single door opening, (the door has been removed), and the exposed concrete and steel work are in poor condition. The townsite includes foundation remnants, remains of a cricket pitch and tennis court, and the Workman and Barrabup Pools. Earthworks associated with the railway built between the mill and Cambray siding are clearly visible along the walking track.

HISTORICAL NOTES

The area adjacent to the south of Nannup now known as Biddelia was first settled by Thomas Dickson in 1854. The existing homestead was constructed of local bricks in 1876 and has been occupied by the Dickson family since that time.

DESCRIPTION

Biddelia Homestead is a symmetrical, rectangular, single storey brick and iron structure with hipped roof, two brick corbelled chimneys and broken backed verandah enclosed with weatherboards to the east and west. The north and south facades feature double hung sash windows and stucco quoining to the centrally location entrances. The site also contains outbuildings and stock yards which are probably significant.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Biddelia is significant to the history of settlement of the southwest of Western Australia. The homestead is a fine example of a typical homestead constructed by the early settlers in the region which has been in continuous use for the time of construction. The significance of the homestead is increased by the level of intactness of the original fabric. The place is also significant as the homestead of the Dickson family who has been prominent in the history of Nannup.

HISTORICAL NOTES

DESCRIPTION

The site includes two prominent cliffed headlands on the south coast of the D'Entrecasteaux National Park, about 1.1km apart. Both display spectacular exposures of the Bunbury Basalt. This formation forms part of the Perth Basin sequence and is rarely exposed at surface, though it is well known from drill intersections and geophysical studies. The formation also provides an important aquifer in the Bunbury region. The basalt shows well developed columnar cooling structures and has well developed sheet jointing. Basalt has been eroded along these joints to form a terraced outcrop. Black Point is the only site in the Perth Basin where late injection basaltic dykes occur.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Black Point is an important outcrop of the rarely exposed Bunbury Basalt, the only post Pre-Cambrian volcanic event in the geological evolution of the Perth Basin. The basalt displays perfectly formed columnar jointing, a structure developed as a result of stresses developed when the basalt cooled and solidified in Cretaceous times. It is an important scientific research site.

Brockman's Bridge is one of the oldest bridges over the Blackwood River. It was built with 9 spans at 5.5, seven at 6.1 and 5.5m.

The squared timbers used for its girders and corbels are consistent with its age; but in other respects it is similar to a more modern bridge.

DESCRIPTION

Brockman's Bridge was closed to traffic in 2001 due to its poor condition. In 2008 it was demolished by Main Roads. There are no plans to construct a new bridge due to difficulties with the river embankments.

HISTORICAL NOTES

There is some conflicting information regarding the history of Darradup House. According to information collected by the South West Heritage Taskforce in 1990, the original Darradup House constructed in 1868 by Stephen Longbottom was demolished following storm damage in 1951 and the remaining structure dates from circa 1900.

HISTORICAL NOTES

However following site investigation, the style of the building and building methods and materials used indicate that at least a part of the remaining structure was constructed prior to 1900. The original pastoral lease for the property dated 12th December 1894 indicates that George Longbottom held the property from January 1888 until December 1907. The existing cottage may have been constructed during this period.

DESCRIPTION

The site contains a number of timber framed structures including Darradup house, an outhouse a small cottage, shed, log structure and several more recently constructed sheds. Darradup House is a timber framed structure with a general 'T' shape floor plan with a gabled roof including prominent entrance and surrounding skillion formed verandah. Although most external features, including weatherboard dado, and 'nosed' timber detailing to door and window frames, is consistent, the roof and plan form suggest the building has been extensively modified. The existing cottage is constructed in two sections. The front section consists of three rooms and is constructed of wattle and daub which has been cement rendered on the outside. There are twelve pane sash windows on the front elevation. The original shingle roof has been replaced by corrugated iron. Asbestos wall linings have been added later. The rear section of the cottage was constructed later and is of timber framed construction with some pressed metal wall and ceiling linings.

HISTORICAL NOTES

The original Donnelly River Mill was established by the Wheatley family in 1912 and closed in 1914. The existing mill was built in 1948 and used by Bunnings until 1978. The mill was served by a network of railway lines. A largely intact example of a mill and mill town which is no longer working but which is capable of being conserved for tourism purposes.

DESCRIPTION

The Donnelly River Mill is constructed largely of local materials. The basic structure of the mill is the mill floor which supports the operating equipment above the floor and also the drive shafts, pulleys and belts under the floor. The initial power to operate all mill equipment came through shafts from a single steam engine. Though below the floor drive equipment was practice in timber mills and reflected the technology required to operate a mill by steam power, this is different from the usual practice in other workshops, which have drive shafts and pulleys in the roof and belt drivers coming down onto the work benches. The purpose of all drive equipment being below floor level was to achieve an open path for the movement of timber through the mill and also to improve safety. Nearly all the mill equipment is located under the main mill roof. The roof is of robust design and is made of two pitched segments joining at a central box gutter sheeted with standard corrugated roofing material. The support structure is all of timber construction; the support columns are of round bush timber, while the roof timbers, trusses and beams were constructed from sawn timber. The three steel chimney stacks are 20m in height and are stabilised with anchored guy ropes. A smaller chimney provided for exhaust of steam from the steam engines. The boilers generating steam for the engines are under a roofed area and are protected from the weather, while the boiler generating kiln steam is protected under a separate roof. Two of the original steam engines, which respectively provide direct belt power to the mill equipment and coupling to an alternator generating electrical power, remain in position and are protected from weather, though in need of maintenance. A third steam engine, which generated electrical power, has been removed apart from the engine block, while a diesel engine has been removed entirely. A fourth steam engine also used for power generation, remains in position. The original switching equipment and switchboards have been removed. Remaining in position are: the winch used to handle logs from trucks into the mill; the overhead winch for positioning logs on the travelling carriage; the travelling carriage itself; the twin saws which made the first log cuts; bench rollers; other saws; moving feed trolleys and rails; packing case benches; the conveyor systems for waste transport, collection of sawdust from the bench saws and supply of sawdust to the kiln boilers; and, the shaft and pulley drive system under the mill floor. The drying kilns have been demolished, as has the large planer building where dressed timber was produced. The equipment has been removed from the site of the planer building and from the pre-cut areas and the second timber sorting table has also been removed. The rail system used to move timber in the storage yard has been dismantled.

DESCRIPTION

The townsite buildings are constructed of timber weatherboards with corrugated iron roofs and are in good condition. They have been maintained to consistent standards over time. The townsite also has a high degree of integrity. All of the buildings have been appropriately adapted to new uses, and many, including the General Store, Workshop, Club and Workers' Cottages, retain their original uses. Donnelly River Mill & Townsite Precinct has a high degree of authenticity. The Mill and its equipment are nearly all as originally built and installed, and repairs and restoration work carried out over the years has not adversely affected the authenticity of the place.

HISTORICAL NOTES

Eileen Higgins House was originally built as a hardware and blacksmith shop for George Higgins after he sold the Nannup Hotel 1912. There were originally stables behind the building. George's son Bob later lived in the house and had the town milking run. Bob and his brother Harry would drive the cows from their paddock along the Bridgetown Rd back to the dairy for milking. In the 1990s the farm was subdivided into four separate lots and in 2014 the house was subdivided from the swamp altogether.

HISTORICAL NOTES

The structural material from a building at the Ellis Creek mill was transported to this site in the late 1920'- early 1930's. The chaff sheds were then constructed, supplying local farmers and businesses with their carrying business.

Jack Lindsay operated a stick agency and cream carrier from this premises. This service began in the 1930's from a shed at the rear of the existing building.

Rural supplies were added in 1942. During the 1940's the front façade was added and became an apple packing shed for local farmers.

It is currently operating as a Hardware store and has been since 1953.

DESCRIPTION

There have been successive owners of the property, each adding extensions and renovations.

HISTORICAL NOTES

James Kearney Jnr built the rear portion of this building in 1904, and the more substantial frontage in 1910. He retained the property but sold the business in 1914 to Peake & Morgan. That business later moved to larger premises while this building played other roles, including as a café. The building has since had various commercial uses.

DESCRIPTION

The front brick section was built as a grocer's store for James Kearney Jnr of Templemore. The building has timber rear additions and a corrugated iron roof.

HISTORICAL NOTES

It is not known who originally built Jalbarragup house, however both the Blythe and McAtee families were associated with the early history of the property.

DESCRIPTION

Jalbarragup House is a two roomed cottage constructed circa 1876 overlooking Jalbarragup Swamp. The original cottage is constructed of bricks made locally on site and has an iron roof. Internally the cottage has original Oregon ceilings. The original kitchen was replaced approximately fifty years ago however the existing chimney is probably original.

HISTORICAL NOTES

Linden is named after the Linden Mine near Menzies, Broken Hill, NSW. The original house built in the 1880s no longer exists, however the 1909 homestead is typical of the period. The property also contains a number of outbuildings and an irrigation system on Nannup Brook which was designed by the original owner R. Lindsay.

DESCRIPTION

The original Linden homestead was constructed of jarrah slabs. This building no longer exists however the jarrah slabs form part of the floor of the existing shearing shed. The original homestead was constructed in 1909 of local bricks made on the property. The homestead was extended in 1915 in weatherboard and iron with elaborate pressed metal wall and ceiling linings.

DESCRIPTION

McMahon's Cottage was originally a 1-bedroom stone & mud house built for Len Hall, a group settler, by 'Pop' Hall, stonemason. Two timber rooms were added in the 1940's by Mick Cockman's father but this extension fell into disrepair and was removed. Confirmation from an occupier of the house in the 1940's confirmed that when he lived in the cottage it was already a very old building. A member of the McMahon family has indicated the original cottage was built in the 1860's.

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Nannup Cemetery land was set aside in 1906. The first Church of England interment occurred in 1908 and there are sections for denominations and paupers. During the 1950s, in response to cattle constantly straying through the cemetery, it was decided that fencing was needed. The Progress Association arranged a "Don't Fence Me In" dance to raise funds for the materials, and cyclone fencing was installed by volunteers. The niche wall was constructed later and in 2012 the wrought iron entry gates were added. The Nannup Cemetery is still in use.

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Nannup Hospital was officially opened on 10th October 1925 by the Minister for Health Mr Norm Baxter. The hospital is believed to have been operating for at least eighteen months before the official opening. The first resident doctor was Dr Andrews who was doctor in Nannup from 1922 to 1934. Miss Addie Lindsay was the first matron. The hospital was built by Mr Clay and his son-in-law Mr Worthington. Although fire destroyed most of the hospital records, it is known that surgery was originally carried out in Dr Andrew's rooms in Warren Rd. After the death of Dr Andrew's in 1934, the community raised funds to add on an operating theatre and labour ward, as a memorial to the respected physician. While the Nannup Hospital no longer provides surgery services it continues to care for the aged and infirm, providing palliative care, an emergency casualty ward and health services.

DESCRIPTION

The Nannup Hospital was originally constructed in jarrah weatherboard and iron. Numerous extensions have been carried out over the years. These can be traced through the Public Works Department records.

HISTORICAL NOTES

The land on which the hotel currently stands was purchased by George Higgins in 1900. The original Blackwood Inn was constructed circa 1900 and extended in 1909. The two-storey section of the Nannup Hotel was constructed in 1924 by the then publican Tommy German. The building was modernised in 1965.

DESCRIPTION

The Nannup Hotel is constructed of common brick and corrugated iron. The single storey hotel element has a simple, stepped and parapeted, projecting gabled frontage with vent and rough-cast finish over a separately articulated skillion verandah, casement windows with small upper panes and a northern entrance with small paned side and fanlights. This portion of the hotel also features short, battened timber eaves and a corbelled brick chimney. The building contains a significant amount of original detail internally including the jarrah staircase and balustrade and pressed metal ceiling linings.

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Nannup Shire office was previously the Nannup State School which consisted of one classroom when it opened in 1905. Additional classrooms were added circa 1925 when the schools from Barrabup and Ellis Creek were relocated to Nannup. A new school was built in 1963 and in 1966 the Shire administration moved from the Old Road Board into the refurbished building.

DESCRIPTION

The building has been refurbished to meet the requirements of the Shire. The second classroom which was relocated from Barrabup has been demolished however the classroom from Ellis Creek still exists and is used as the library. The original school buildings were constructed of timber weatherboard with corrugated iron sheeting.

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Nannup Timber Mill was built in 1925 after the closure of the Barrabup and Ellis Creek Mills. Previous mill owners were the Kauri Timber Company until 1963, Douglas Jones Pty Ltd, Millars and Bunnings. The original mill burnt down in 1954 and only the chimney remained. While the original mill was steam-driven, the new mill was powered by electricity. Mill cottages are located adjacent to the mill and form an integral aspect of the place.

DESCRIPTION

The Nannup Timber Mill includes a series of saw tooth sheds with a prominent, corbelled brick chimney, large circular steel incinerator, and circular timber framed and corrugated iron milling ring called "betting ring". A separately located timber framed, weatherboard and tile administration building are located at the entry to the milling yards. The timber workers cottages are located in two settlements; one to the north of Mill Street, on View Terrace, and the one to the south off a gravel drive parallel to Warren Road. The buildings are typically timber framed and weatherboard structures with gabled roofs and broken-backed verandahs set behind simple picket fences, often with adjacent timber framed skillion roofed carports. Notable features include external galvanised chimney flues and simple timber framed casement windows.

HISTORICAL NOTES

Nannup Town Hall was constructed in 1903 and has been used for a variety of purposes including the first schoolhouse in the town, for church services and for showing films. The supper room adjacent was constructed in 1937. The buildings were both constructed of jarrah weatherboards with iron roofs and were restored and reopened by the Town Hall Preservation Society in 1988.

DESCRIPTION

The Nannup Town Hall and Supper Room consists of two linked timber framed and weatherboard structures with simple gabled roofs, exposed eaves, projecting gabled entry to the Hall and timber framed sash windows. The Hall is a double volume structure with a small skillion formed addition located along the southern façade and a larger, more recent toilet block abutting the eastern portion of the north façade.

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Nannup Uniting Church was built in 1937 as a Methodist Church. Stone was hauled by horse and dray from Mt Folly for this building. The site originally also contained a church hall and manse on the south side which were used as a church until the completion of the present church. The hall was demolished after being badly damaged by termites. The first marriage to take place in the new church was held on 2nd April 1938 by Reverend Finch.

DESCRIPTION

The Nannup Uniting Church was designed with a rectangular floor plan and an enclosed projecting entry porch. The walls are constructed of random stone with brick quoins and reveals, terracotta wall vents, plain rendered windowsills and two plain rendered pilasters to each of the side walls. The roof is clad with corrugated iron with gable ends to the porch and principal façade and a gabled hip to the rear. The main gable features a circular vent with a rendered cross and the rear hip has timber louvres. There are three pointed arch windows to each of the side walls and a single pointed arch window to the front of the porch. Each of these has ripple glass, with two panes to the arch and four panes to the main section of the window. At the rear of the church a more recent skillion addition has been built using random stone and brick quoins to complement the original.

HISTORICAL NOTES

The former Newsagent, Barber & Billiard Room building was constructed in 1924 by Bill Worthington and Jack Whittle. The building was originally operated as a tobacconist and barber's shop with a billiard saloon by George Smith who sold the business to Bill Blythe around 1928. The Church of England operated an Op shop out of the building for a number of years, as did the Nannup Furniture Gallery. The building currently operates as a shop known as The Wicked Shed.

DESCRIPTION

The former Newsagent, Barber & Billiard Room building was constructed of timber weatherboards with a corrugated iron roof. It has recently been re-clad with grey colourbond following white ant damage to the original weatherboards.

HISTORICAL NOTES

St Thomas More Roman Catholic Church was built in 1925 and in the late 1930s a convent and St Joseph's School were built at the side and rear of the church. The school was closed in the 1950s but the convent remained in use until the late 1960s. Both the school and convent buildings were relocated to and are still in use at the Catholic Youth Camp at Busselton.

DESCRIPTION

St Thomas More Roman Catholic Church is constructed using timber that was originally sourced from the nearby Claymore Mill and has a corrugated iron roof.

HISTORICAL NOTES

Suda's Shops were constructed circa 1910 for Mr George and were originally used as a chemist shop and a drapery shop. The property was purchased in 1937 by Mr William Blythe. The building currently houses a craft shop, the Nannup visitor information service and a restaurant. After the railway was extended to Nannup in 1909, Miss Winifred George opened a drapery here. It was supported several years later by her brother, the first chemist in Nannup. It was sold to W. O. White about 1925, the business was taken over by Bill Blythe (Snr) around 1937. Bill maintained the drapery, which later passed on to his son Bill (jnr) & his wife. In 1987, new owners Brian & Diane Gee opened 'Crafty Creations' here and it has been a craft & gift shop ever since.

In 2013 a feature film Drift was released after the shooting of the film was set here in Nannup, taking on the name of Seacliffe. This location was used because it had maintained the authentic Western Australian country town feel of the 60's & 70's. Suda's Shop / A Taste of Nannup played a central role in the production, standing in for the surf shop of the film's title.

DESCRIPTION

Suda's Shops are constructed of timber weatherboards with a corrugated iron roof.

HISTORICAL NOTES

Tathra Cottage was built by William Ellis who took up land in the area circa 1870. The building has been conserved and restored by the present owner and is open to the public as a folk museum with an interpretive display depicting the life of the early settlers.

DESCRIPTION

Tathra Cottage consists of a simple, white-washed timber pole and slab structure with a gabled iron roof over the main room, skillion formed verandah to the north and skillion-roofed enclosure to the south. Features include a random laid stone chimney and flue to the east façade, along with a variety of timber framed windows to the north, east and south. A panel of louvered windows has been added to the southwest.

HISTORICAL NOTES

Originally named Templemore, the Stopping Place was the home of James Kearney, an early resident of Nannup. Mr Kearney purchased Lots 2 & 3 Warren Rd in 1896.

DESCRIPTION

Stopping Place is constructed of brick walls with a corrugated iron roof. A residential extension constructed of timber weatherboards was added to the rear of the building in the early 2000s. A low brick wall is constructed at the front of the property which replaced the original timber picket fence.

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Westpac Bank Building was constructed circa 1928 for Tommy Gorman publican of the Nannup Hotel after the completion of the hotel extensions. The site includes the bank building, the adjacent café and a warehouse at the rear. The shops have had a variety of uses including grocery, hardware and butchers' businesses prior to the Bank of New South Wales taking over the premises. The Blackwood Café section of the building has had a variety of functions including café, hardware store and Boys' Club. The warehouse at the rear was originally a bakery. It was built for Wally Thompson who was the baker. Mr Thompson lived opposite and was previously the baker at Barrabup Mill.

DESCRIPTION

The Westpac Bank Building is constructed of rendered brick and iron with a bull-nosed verandah which is probably not original. The windows to the former bank section are not original however the re-entrant doors to the café are original as is the entrance to the bank. The warehouse at the rear of the site is constructed of random rubble with brick quoining and is probably earlier than the shops.
